Street Skills Workshop

In this four-hour seminar, Michael Janich presents a crash-course in his rarely taught empty-hand fighting system, which draws from more than 30 years of experience and analysis of the martial arts. Designed to provide a one-stop solution for empty-hand self-defense needs or to integrate seamlessly with any other martial arts style, this system focuses on multi-functional patterns of movements that allow one combative “plan” to serve many defensive functions. In addition to the empty hand skill sets Mike will address the use of tactical flashlights in self-protection as well as a segment on improvised weapons.
